To Whom it may concern,

I received a classical education in one of the finest preparatory schools in the nation, Roxbury Latin School in West Roxbury, Massachusetts. From there I ventured on to Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, to partake in an entirely different educational experience. In a small liberal arts college such as Antioch where individuality is encouraged, I began to flourish. My studies were mainly focused upon Foreign Civilizations and language studies. As part of my Antioch work-study experience I travelled abroad. I met Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh in 1979. The emphasis of my work began to change once I had become a disciple, and during the completion of my college education I became much more involved in the healing arts. I led regular meditations and massage workshops on campus for all community members, overjoyed at being able to share with them the richness of my experience since becoming a rajneeshite. Once I graduated from college I became a massage therapist and assistant acupuncturist in Boston while attending the N.E. School of Acupuncture.

In Bhagwan's presence my life has become a celebration. I feel more responsive and compassionate towards others through the love that I feel.

Bhagwan's presence brings fulfillment to my life. He fills my heart with love and laughter which I am now able to share with people with whom I work.

Sincerely,

Daniel J. Rosenberg
