To Whom it may concern.

I understand that it is your policy to make an occasional award to some-one whom you consider has made an exceptional contribution to humanity. I should like to put forward to you the name of Bagwan Shree Raynesh.

As a graduate with an honours degree in Theology from Nottingham University (1967) I have been greatly impressed by his contribution to religious thinking. I believe that his theology is a significant contribution to the world's theological and moral development particularly in the bringing together of insights from all the world's greatest religions.

I have not only studied theology but also trained with the Clinical Theology association in counselling skills. Out of interest I attended one of the groups being run by the Rajneesh movement, and found that those involved were highly skilled and competent therapists whose knowledge and training were deeper than my own. These excellent standards I attribute to Bhawan Sri Rajneesh himself. He had developed the philosophical basis upon which his growth work is undertaken, and created the training schemes which lead to such a high degree of excellence.

In my professional life I am a teacher (post-graduate certificate of education from Clifton College 1976 - with distinction) specialising in the problems of young children with special needs. I am constantly indebted to the insights of Bagwan Shree Rajneesh, both in understanding the problems that are presented to me and in extending the ways in which I may best help.

I am writing to you as a professional person who is not a member of the Bagwan Shree Rajneesh movement but who is deeply impressed by all that I have seen of it. I believe it is inspired by a man exceptional vision, a vision which to me embodies a meaningful future for mankind.
