To whom it may concern

I am a graduate of London University, majored in French and English (B.A. Hons.). I am also a holder of the Royal Society of Arts Certificate (R.S.A. Cert. 1st Class) for the teaching of English as a foreign language. I have been involved in the most advanced research and practice of language teaching in London and Spain as a member of International House over the past 7 years.

I first came across Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh 5 years ago when I heard him speak in Poona, India. I must say that since hearing this man speak my understanding of language and the way we communicate through the mind has been expanded beyond anything I could possibly imagine. I have studied many theories and methods of education, but never before come across someone who so simply and lucidly could explain the physiological and psychological functionings of the human mind. I am further convinced that Rajneesh's insights are beyond any previously researched theory or methodology because they come from a deeper source of understanding and experience, which is unique in our time. I believe his ideas on the functioning of the left and right hemispheres of the brain are going to revolutionize our whole education process and bring tremendous benefits to the whole humanity.

My whole life I have worked with words. Recently in attending the Festival recently held by the Rajneesh disciples in Oregon in Rajneesh's presence I have come to understand something beyond words. I feel immensely grateful to this man who now in his silence has led me to ever deeper insights into life and the purpose of existence. In Rajneeshpuram he is creating new ways of communication through silence and love which make our ordinary language seem very gross.

I shall continue to work with words but I must say I shall always be grateful for the opportunity of sitting in silence with this extraordinary man. I believe he is a genius of the same calibre as Buddha or Albert Einstein and that wherever he lives his presence will bring immense benefit to that country and its people.

Yours Sincerely,
