Dear Sirs,

may I introduce myself:

I was born in May 5th, 1937, in Germany. After the final examinations of the secondary school I studied political economy, management, chemistry, jurisprudence, psychology and pedagogy at the Edmund-Siemers-University in Hamburg. After the completion of my studies I was bestowed with the academic graduate as a Diplom-handelslehrer, which could be regarded as corresponding to a M.A.-degree. Subsequently I was promoted to a senior assistant master at the Federal State of Hesse Police Academy and main coordinator for natural science classes in Hesse, too. Since 1967 I am living in D-3500 Kassel, W.Germany, ^{in my residence} and I won't even consider to emigrate to the U.S.

Surely Bhagwan is an outstanding personality in many fields of arts and science. With regards to my studies I would especially give prominence to his exeptional abilities in psychologic and pedagogic matters. Since among others I took the "est"-training and the "communication-workshop" (both established by Werner Erhard, San Francisco) I got a short glimpse of what could be possible by consequently following this path. In a way BHagwans teachings also could be compared with the (originally Californian) Eckankar-movement. I think that both W.Erhard and Eckankar are better known in the States than Bhagwan, though Bhagwan is internationally much more better known than e.g. "est" or Eckankar. I got contact to Bhagwan by watching the effect on friends and their work and by taking the "est"-training, and I have found that Bhagwans teachings are by many means the very best of all.

Yours very truly,
