To Whom it May Concern:

Today I write as a person concerned with the artistic, scientific and spiritual aspect of this country. I am a retired transcriptionist and custodian of the medical records of a large general hospital. As such, I have great respect for scientific progress by any means. My formal education when I was young was three years in a Liberal Arts program and one year toward a degree in Fine Arts.

Of greater importance to me, I am a mother of a son who has found peace of mind as a follower of Bhaqwan for the past five years, after a youth filled with misery, drugs and even desperation, despite a so-called "good private church-school education."

At first I was afraid of this group of followers my son had joined, but finally I realized that it has been the best thing that could have happened to him at this time of his life, and probably I have to thank Bhagwan that I still have my only son on this earth, happy, free and full of love.

I have listened to Bhagwan's tapes and read his words. He is a good and peaceful man and I believe he would be an asset to this country and should be welcomed by the United States of America.

Sincerely,
(Mrs.) Dorothy H. Gay
