TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN -----

I am from a wealthy family, well educated and aware of civic concerns. I went to well reputed schools and received a good education. I was very much attracted to the field of social work as I was interested in teenagers' problems. When I left school, I travelled and spent time with young people. Later on I was introduced to Bhagwan through books and friends. I was very enthusiastic about his approach to life. He was answering questions that were my main concern for years. I went to Poona, India, where I could participate in the therapy groups and go further into my experience with him and became a disciple. More and More I came to realize the extraordinary capacity of this man, and his immense capacity for helping humanity. When I came back from India, I worked with educated instructors in an open center for delinquents. I was there for a year and a half and the knowledge and experience I had gathered by being with Bhagwan was an immense help for these teenagers. The most important impact on these kids was to accept and be honest with themselves and use their capacities in a creative way instead of a disturbing, destructive way in all levels of their personalities, in their way of relating with others in society. I think this man has a gift for the world, and we should see him providing us with an incredible opportunity for this age, for us to be benefited by his teachings, he has the ability to heal the ills of society and help it to blossom into more harmony, love and creativity.

I, myself, am forever immensely thankful for the presence of this Master who has brought so much more quality and love to my life.

I wish you could appreciate it and share it with me.

Thank you for hearing me.
